CENTENNIAL ALMANAC FOR 1886.

MERCURY IS THE GOVERNING PLANET THIS YEAR.

THE YEAR IN GENERAL.—Is more dry and cold than warm, and seldom fruitful.

SPRING.—The end of March will be warm, April, until the 25th, dry, afterwards cold. May will have some cold days in the commencement, so that the fruit will be in danger.

SUMMER.—Will have a good deal of rain, by which the earth will, however, not be properly refreshed. The hay and grain can be brought in pretty well, though it will be best not to delay with it.

AUTUMN.—In the commencement there will be a great deal of rain, and there will be early frost; but when the half of October is past, there will be dry weather, until the commencement of advent.

WINTER.—After a pleasant autumn, winter will fall in suddenly in the commencement of December; it will be cold and snow until February, which will appear rather mild; but from the middle on to the 4th of March it will be cold; and from thence on to the termination, storms and tempests will take place.

CULTIVATION OF SPRING GRAIN.—Will succeed pretty well. It is a favorite year for barley. Oats, peas, and other leguminous plants must be sown when the ground is neither too dry nor too wet and damp. Hemp and flax will be good, but the hemp will remain short.

CULTIVATION OF WINTER GRAIN.—Is various. If the summer of the preceding year was very warm, wheat and rye will in the present year yield largely in straw, but little in the grain; but if the preceding year was humid, they will yield well in the grain. Rye and wheat will be endangered in the blossoming.

AUGUST SEEDING.—The early and the late will be the best; the middle one will be consumed by the flies. The early sown grain can be pastured by the sheep in the spring, but the late sown must not.

FRUIT.—In some places it will grow abundantly, in some places tolerably, and in others there will be none at all.

HOPS.—Will not be abundant nor strong.

GRAPE CULTURE seldom succeeds; probably in five or six years once; is always rough, and if ever it promises fairly in the spring, it seldom produces anything good; for two unproductive years will follow yet, viz., that of the Moon and Saturn.

TEMPESTS AND THUNDERGUSTS.—The east wind will be the most prevalent, sometimes the west, but seldom the north wind; during the summer there will be but few thundergusts.

FISHES.—There will be but few fish in the stream during the summer; in autumn they will increase.

DISEASES.—Can be cured only slowly in this year and they prevail mostly in the spring and latter of autumn. Epidemic diseases generally prevail among the cattle this year.

INTRODUCTION.

One of the most common things in every household is the family almanac, and we suppose it is more frequently consulted than any other kind of literature. The whole household becomes familiar with the almanac. Every page is carefully read and re-read, so that it is important that its character be such as will commend it to every Christian family. Taking into consideration this fact, we have been careful to fill its pages with such reading as will be interesting and profitable to all who may read it.

For a number of years we have been issuing an almanac for the special benefit of our patrons and such others as desire a good family almanac. We are pleased to believe that so far our work has given good satisfaction, as the number wanted is larger each year. This one, for the year 1886, we hope will be, if not better, quite as good as its predecessors, and will demand an equally good patronage.

In our introductory we need not tell you that another year has run its course, and that we all are one year further on in the journey of life. This we all know; but how slow we are to realize that time is passing, and that our opportunities for doing good and preparing for the better life are daily growing less.

It is a solemn thing to contemplate, that in some of the thousands of homes in which this almanac will find a place, death will come and take his quota. Of course none of us knows who it will be, but we fondly entertain the hope that the called ones may be such as are prepared for the change, so that it can be said of them, they are not dead—they have only gone before. Dear reader, among the called your name may be enrolled. Let us all feel that we may be among the number, and so live that whether the summons come or not, we may be ready.

May the year 1886 be to all of us a year of Christian enjoyment and spiritual prosperity. May our souls prosper as the good Lord prospers us, and may all the golden opportunities be improved in laying up treasures in heaven.

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.

Never use a lady's name in an improper place, or at an improper time, or in mixed company. Never make assertions about her that you think are untrue, allusions that you feel she herself would blush to hear. When you meet with men who do not scruple to make use of a woman's name in a reckless and unprincipled manner, shun them, for they are the very worst members of the community—men lost to every sense of honor, every feeling of humanity. Many a good and worthy woman's character has been forever ruined and her heart broken by a lie, concocted by some villain, and repeated where it should not have been, and in the presence of those whose judgment could not deter them from circulating the foul report. A slander is soon propagated, and the smallest thing derogatory to a woman's character will fly on the wings of the wind, and magnify as it circulates, until its monstrous weight crushes the poor unconscious victim. Respect the women, for your mother and sisters are women, and as you would have their fair name untarnished, and their life unembittered by the slanderer's biting tongue, heed the ill that your own words may bring upon the mother, the sister, or the wife of some fellow-man.

MILK DIET.

Milk should enter largely into the diet of children. It contains caseine, or flesh-forming material, cream and sugar, which are heat producers; mineral salts, for the bony structure; and water as a solvent for all the other materials necessary in nutrition. It should be used with discretion, however; not drunk immoderately, but taken slowly as food after the pattern given by nature. Milk as taken is a fluid, but as soon as it meets the acid of the gastric juice, it is changed to a soft, curdy, cheese-like substance, and then must be digested, and the stomach is overtaken if too much be taken at once. A large glass of milk swallowed suddenly will form in the stomach a lump of dense, cheesy curd, which may even prove fatal to a weak stomach. Under the action of the stomach this cheesy mass will turn over and over like a heavy weight, and, as the gastric juice can only attack its surface, it digests very slowly. But this same milk, taken slowly, or with dry toast, light rolls, or soft dry porridge, forms a porous lump through which the gastric juice can easily pass, and which breaks up every time the stomach turns it over. Milk should be slightly salted, and eaten with breadstuffs or sipped by the spoonful. Cow's milk produces less heat than human milk; a child would grow thin upon it unless a little sugar were added. Wheat flour has such an excess of heat-producing material as would fatten a child unduly, and should have cow's milk added to it to reduce its fattening power.

THE TWO CHRISTOPHER SAURS (FATHER AND SON), FIRST PRINTERS OF THE BIBLE IN AMERICA.

Posterity seldom denies the tribute of honorable remembrance to those who have been pioneers in a good cause and labored for the welfare of mankind. In this respect full justice has not been done to the two Saur's. Only scant biographical sketches have been published, and the distinction between the two, since they both bore the same name, has not always been as marked as necessary to a thorough understanding of their history.

EARLY DAYS OF CHRISTOPHER SAUR, SEN.

The subject of this part of our sketch was born in 1693, at Laasphe, a small town in Westphalia, in a neighborhood noted at that time for an extensive religious movement. Many had become dissatisfied with the existing religious bodies, and longed for a purer life, with more of the spirit, and less of the formality of a professor. Although at that time such departures were not tolerated by the different governments, yet they found a safe retreat in the above-mentioned vicinity, where the authorities themselves were in favor of the movement. In this peculiar religious atmosphere, Christopher Saur reached the years of manhood. Schwarzenau, where the Brethren originated in 1708, was but a short distance from the place where Saur had settled down and worked at tailoring, in connection with other trades. He became fully identified with the grand reformatory movement of the Brethren, and when, a few years after, persecutions arose, he decided to emigrate, with others, to the land of promise, the country of William Penn.

In the fall of 1724 he reached Germantown, accompanied by his wife and three-year-old boy, Christopher. When he arrived, there were many still living who had found that place an unbroken wilderness and could tell of the hardships of the early days. Here Saur staid two years, when he went to Millback, Lancaster county, to devote himself to agricultural pursuits. He purchased a tract of land in Leacock township, but did not remain long, since Conrad Beissel, the Seventh Day enthusiast, prevailed upon Saur's wife to leave husband and child and join the body afterwards known as the Ephrata Seventh Day Brethren. She remained with them until 1744, when she returned to her husband, upon remonstrances made by her son.

After this domestic trouble, Christopher Saur returned in 1731 to Germantown, where he carried on business of various kinds, until, seven years later, he established

THE PRINTING OFFICE.

Among the first publications of Christopher Saur was his almanac, which was first published in 1738 and continued without interruption until 1777. In these almanacs he, as well as his son, aimed to instruct rather than entertain, and here it is where we find his opinion of slavery. He says: "America has a special abomination. Though the earth yields largely, that every one might have bread in plenty, yet they steal many black slaves, buy and sell them like cattle, though they are men like ourselves, excepting the color." His first work, a collection of hymns, was about the largest that had thus far appeared in this country.

August 20, 1759, appeared in Saur's publishing house the first German paper ever printed in America. It contained four pages, in size 9x13; the title of the publication (in English) being: "The High-German, Pennsylvanian Historian, or a collection of important events in nature and church." In his editorial he mentions that he did not propose to publish a newspaper in the common acceptance of the term, but rather a collection of facts that might tend to better humanity.

This small periodical first appeared only quarterly, but soon gained so many friends that it could be published monthly. The subscription price then was three shillings (forty cents) per year. In 1745 the name was changed from "Historian" to "Reports," since, as Saur expresses it, "many things were reported that were not actual facts, but simply suppositions or even falsehoods." With the year 1749 the "Reports" were published semi-monthly, and in 1775 by his son weekly. The old price of three shillings was still retained, although the readers received fifty-two instead of twelve numbers. His reason for retaining the old price was, that the extra expense was covered by increased receipts from advertisements, and he did not propose to be paid twice for the same work. The paper had attained a circulation of 4000 copies and over,—certainly very good for that time, and was published until 1777, when the Revolutionary War stopped its publication.

PRINTING OF THE BIBLE, ETC.

Soon after the establishing of the office, Christopher Saur contemplated printing a complete and correct German Bible. This was a great undertaking at that time, as the first English Bible, which appeared forty years later, was not published until special provisions were made by the State. Saur issued a prospectus of the Bible, wherein he states, among other things, that the price would likely be (unbound) fourteen shillings per copy, depending somewhat on the size of edition, etc. After the Bible was published, it appeared that it was even cheaper, costing only twelve shillings unbound, and eighteen shillings bound in strong leather binding. This first edition of the Bible was published in 1743, and attracted great attention even in Germany. Two other editions were published by Christopher Saur (the younger), in 1763 and 1776.

The other publications of Saur were mostly religious works in the German language, numbering with those of the younger Saur, about 150.

With the different churches of his day Saur frequently got into conflict, not because he desired to be at variance, but because he could see the defects among them with an unprejudiced eye. He upheld peace principles, and for that cause alone, incurred the enmity of those advocating that a Christian might bear arms, and still be a follower of the lowly Nazarene. The "hireling ministry," as he called it, had ideas entirely different from his own, and though Saur never attacked their personal character, yet he could not avoid offending them by his persistent teaching of the truth. It is to be regretted that a lack of space forbids giving a more definite account of the relations of Saur to the political events of the day. Suffice it to say that at all times he preserved his non-resistant principles, claiming even the treatment of the Indian as unworthy a Christian people, and the wars with them as not only unnecessary but cruel.

As a philanthropist Saur deserves special mention. The passenger transport of those days was carried on in such corruption, that sometimes one-half of the passengers died in coming over, owing to insufficient food and the crowded condition on board, where they were huddled together like so many cattle. On one occasion only sixty out of four hundred reached their destination. These matters called for earnest action, and through the influence of Saur, the friends of humanity finally prevailed upon the Legislature to pass stringent laws, regulating the passenger-transport, which helped matters greatly.

Christopher Saur took an active part at a meeting Dec. 6, 1759, for the purpose of establishing an academy for the education of the rising generation. Our record says that he took the lead, not in merely talking, but contributing liberally, so that the meeting was successful in raising the needed amount, Saur being one of six of a committee, and could commence building already the following January. In the welfare of the school Saur took much interest, and inasmuch as his zeal extended even unto his substance, we may learn that in this, our day, such help is not only acceptable, but due the cause from all the lovers of education and enlightenment.

Sept. 25, 1758, Christopher Saur departed this life, being in his sixty-fourth year, of which thirty-four years had been spent in this country.

THE YOUNGER CHRISTOPHER SAUR.

As we have seen before, Christopher Saur, Jun., came with his father to the land of freedom at the age of three years. His mother having left the family circle for a cell in the Sisters' building at Ephrata, the young Christopher was left to the care of his father. In many respects were the characteristics of the older Saur transmitted to his son.

Christopher Saur, Jun., joined the church of the Brethren when in his sixteenth year, and, according to the testimony of even his opponents, remained faithful to his baptismal vows until death. He was chosen to the ministry several years after his baptism, and the confidence of the Brethren was very great in him, on account of the unwavering fidelity to the non-resistant principles of the Gospel. He was a member of the first Brethren's congregation in America,—the one which organized with Peter Becker as elder, Dec. 25, 1723, at Beggartown, the upper part of Germantown, at the house of John Pettikof. Saur was a faithful assistant in the ministry to the elder, Alexander Mack.

April 21, 1751, Christopher Saur, Jun., united in matrimony with Catharine Sharpneck, and nine children blessed their union. He took charge of his father's business with zeal and an enterprising spirit, and, as a natural consequence, prospered. The second edition of his Bible having a good profit, he felt himself under obligation to do something in return. Accordingly he published a religious paper for several years, which he distributed free of charge.

As his father did before him, so also did the younger Saur carry on different branches of business, together with his publishing interests. He made his own type; his type-foundry being the first on this continent. His paper-mill made a superior quality of paper for that time, while his printing ink and presses were made under his special supervision. Of his medical preparations it is said that they could always be depended upon for purity and general excellence.

The younger Saur was not so fortunate as his father in escaping a serious conflict with the government. The stirring times of the Revolutionary War had come and when, in 1777, Saur had gone to Philadelphia for a short visit with his sons, he was on his return in 1778 arrested as being in sympathy with the English. He was, however, liberated, and ordered to go to Metutchen. Before, however, he was even permitted to go there, he was subjected to indignities that none could have suffered patiently unless filled with the spirit of Christ. On his way to the "Orderly Office," the soldiers even took his clothing, leaving him neither hat nor shoes. When old brother Peter Keyser's father met him in such a sad plight, he asked the soldiers if they would let Saur keep hat and shoes if he would give him such. They agreed, and thereupon Keyser took off his own shoes and hat and gave them to Saur. While Saur was at Metutchen, there was a proclamation issued giving the names of all such as were regarded as traitors to the revolutionary cause, and ordering all such to appear before the Supreme Court at Lancaster, to clear themselves of the charge. Saur's name was among the rest, but as he never got a copy of the proclamation at Metutchen, he could not obey its mandates at the appointed time, and so, on returning to Germantown, he found that his property was to be confiscated by the State. He bore it all willingly and without a murmur. He might have had recourse to the law for being condemned without a trial, and regained his property, but this his principles did not permit. The total value of his property could not have been short of $100,000, which was all taken away. To give up all this required principle and strength of character equalled by few.

The greatest sorrow, however, to Saur was the stigma that attached to his name,—that he had been declared a traitor. The loss of his property he counted as nothing, but he did not like to be condemned of a crime which he had never committed. To the Yearly Meeting of the Brethren he addressed himself once as follows: "If a man is openly declared a traitor without a cause, without a hearing or trial, when he was not absent and might have been heard, is it just to let him lie forever under that reproach?"

The rest of his life he spent at the hospitable home of his friend Stamm, where he worked at his trade as opportunity might offer. He remained active in the ministry, and even two weeks before his death went a distance of twelve miles on foot to Skippack, returning in the same apostolic manner. Aug. 26, 1784, he died at the age of sixty-three years.

Much more might be written and told of these two brethren, honorable to us for their true worth and strength of character, but our space is limited and we must close. It is but just to

HISTORICAL FACTS RELATING TO THE BIBLE.

The thirty-nine books of the Old Testament, it is thought, were written in Hebrew. The twenty-seven books of the New Testament, it is thought, were written in Greek. The Old Testament was translated into Greek, about three hundred years before Christ.

About the year 1455 the Bible was first printed in Latin at Mentz, Germany. The first complete English Bible was proposed by John Reynolds, of Oxford. Reynolds' proposition was favored by King James I, who appointed fifty-four learned and pious men, to make the translations; the work occupied nearly four years.

The Bible was first printed in America in the language of the native Indian, by Rev. John Elliott—the New Testament in 1661, the Old Testament in 1663—published at Cambridge, Mass. The second Bible printed in America, was in the German language, published at Germantown, near Philadelphia, by Christopher Saur, in 1752.

The first English American Bible was printed by Kneeland and Green, at Boston, in 1752. It is remarkable how fruitless have been the repeated efforts to destroy the Bible. Despite of its numerous foes it has been safely handed down through all former tongues, languages, and generations, thus clearly fulfilling Christ's prophetic declaration, that "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

I. J. ROSENBERGER.

THE MAZARIN BIBLE.

The oldest printed book in the world is the Mazarin Bible. It is so called because a copy of it was found in the library of that celebrated French statesman, Mazarin, in Paris, about the middle of the last century. It was beautifully printed in Latin, and when offered for sale, not a human being, except the artists, could tell how the work had been done. The printing was finished as early as 1455, and the binding and illuminating were completed at Mentz in 1456.

It was in two volumes, and there were about twenty copies, eighteen of which are still to be found, ten being in private libraries in England. Some of these are printed on vellum, a very fine kind of parchment, some on paper of choice quality, with black and tolerably handsome letters.

Of this book, Hallam, the historian, thus writes:

"In imagination we may see this venerable and splendid volume leading up the crowded myriads of its followers, and imploring, as it were, a blessing on the new art by dedicating its first-fruits to the service of heaven."

A copy of this Bible was sold a few years ago for twenty-five hundred dollars.

A TREE THAT GIVES LIGHT AT NIGHT.

A most remarkable tree or shrub grows in a small gulch near some springs about twelve miles north of Tuscarora, Nevada. It is about six or seven feet in height, with a trunk, which at its base, is three times the size of a man's wrist.

Its leaves, at a certain season of the year, are so luminous that it can be plainly distinguished in the darkest night for the distance of more than a mile; while in its immediate vicinity it emits sufficient light to enable a person to read the finest print. Its foliage is extremely plentiful, and resembles somewhat in size, shape, and color, the aromatic bog-tree in California.

The luminous property is evidently parasitic, and consists of a sort of a gummy substance, which, upon being transferred by rubbing to a person's hand, imparts to it the same apparently phosphorescent light; while that on the leaf entirely disappears.

The Indians regarded it with superstition, and will not approach it even in day-time, if they can possibly avoid it. They have a name for it, which literally interpreted, signifies "witch tree." An old Shoshone said there were only two others in the entire country.—Selected by I. J. R.

ONE STEP AT A TIME.

George Manning had almost decided to become a Christian. One doubt held him back. "How can I know," he said to himself, "that even if I do begin a religious life, I shall continue faithful, and finally reach heaven?" He wanted to see the whole way there before taking the first step. While in this state of indecision and unhappiness, he one evening sought the house of his favorite Professor—for he was a college student at the time—and they talked for several hours upon the all-absorbing topic. But the conversation ended without dispelling his fears or bringing him any nearer the point of decision.

When he was about to go home, the Professor accompanied him to the door, and observing how dark the night was, prepared a lantern, and handing it to his friend, said, "George, this little light will not show you the whole way to your room, but only one step at a time; but take that step, and you will reach your home in safety." It proved the word in season. As George walked securely along the path, brightened by the little lantern, the truth flashed through his mind, dispelling the last shadow of doubt. "Why can I not trust my Heavenly Father," he said to himself, "even if I can't see my way clear to the end, if He gives me light to take one step? I will trust Him; I do trust Him." He could hardly wait till he reached his room to fall on his knees and thank God for the peace and joy that filled his soul. Early the next morning the professor was summoned to the door. There he found George Manning. With beaming face he looked up to his teacher, and as he handed him the lantern, said significantly: "Doctor, your little lamp lighted me all the way home last night."

PUNCTUALITY.

One of the many forms of selfishness, is a want of punctuality, the root of all evil. If your father is a man who counts much upon the pleasure of having all his family with him at his meals, you may, by your dilatoriness, quite spoil them for him, any proof of a child's indifference being a poor appetizer. Nor is it merely with the enjoyment of his meal, that you may interfere, but with his digestion; since the most material functions of our material bodies are greatly assisted, or greatly hindered, by moral agencies.

The unpunctual man is apt to think that the greatest evil he occasions, by his special infirmity, is temporary inconvenience or disappointment. But this is not so. If one of his delays should disturb only the arrangements for one day of a single person, he may congratulate himself. Order is heaven's first law, and the second, regular routine, is like unto it. If the earth and the moon were to loiter in their course, and accomplish their revolutions at uncertain times, and in uncertain periods, everything here would be out of joint. And so is everything out of joint that is in the sphere of duty and occupation of the prognosticator.

If the duty that belongs to one hour be deferred to another, they seem subjected to a process that merges one in another, until all are reduced to a single vanishing point, and leave no record behind them. What bitter disappointment, and what serious annoyance and loss, may come from a letter, a little too late for the mail, a bill paid after the promised time, an appointment not kept, a commission deferred! Note for yourselves, and think on these things.

Punctuality is essential to another virtue—reliableness. Do all that you promise to do, and all that you are rightfully required and expected to do, as certainly, so far as it depends upon yourself, as the sun rises and sets, so that the hearts of all with whom you are in any way connected may "safely trust" in you. Then you will become "pillars of support" in the family and in society, instead of broken reeds.

The comfort and satisfaction of dealing with the truly reliable is immense, as, of course, also is the misery of all intercourse with the unreliable. Go when you say you will go; come when you say you will come; do this and that when you say you will do it, even if it be a little thing, without being deterred by any but insuperable obstacles.

COMFORT ONE ANOTHER.

In how many ways this apostolic injunction may be obeyed. The promises of God are varied as are human wants and sorrows, and the heart of love can so employ them as to bring a message of comfort to all who are in need. Jesus, in His intercourse with His intimate friends and disciples, was always ready to comfort them. Over the waves of the tempestuous sea His voice is heard, saying: "It is I, be not afraid." The sisters of Bethany looked not in vain for the coming of that friend whose presence brought comfort, that made the desolated home full of gladness and joy. When the hour of His crucifixion drew near, and He knew the trial that would come in His separation from the disciples, He prepares their hearts by words of comfort that can never cease to help those who love Him.

One of the highest privileges in connection with the Christian life, is that of comforting others. How few there are but that have some burden or trouble. All around us are those who look into open graves. Death has robbed them of their best heart treasures. Everywhere else the outlook is dark and cheerless, but from the promises of God flow streams of healing comfort. It is for you to recall these words to the mind of the stricken one, and open the only way of relief. When earthly troubles and anxieties come, nothing can bring such help as that which is derived from the sustaining assurances of the watchful care of a Heavenly Father, who overrules all the changing circumstances of life for good. It may be that it is appointed to you to be the messenger of this comfort. As brethren, we ought to expect to comfort others, and receive comfort in the day of our need. To-day we can cheer by a word drawn from the Divine storehouse of knowledge and experience, those who are cast down under the burden of fear and doubt. To-morrow it may be our privilege to send a ray of hope into the heart of a father or mother, mourning over a wayward child, as one dead. The promise we drop in the ear of a young disciple may bring a comfort that shall awaken the zeal that is ready to slacken. There are verses in the New Testament that have been open windows into heaven to many a mourning heart. Lead them gently where they may catch this outlook. Comfort one another. Let us stop amid the cares that press us, and the duties that are urgent in their demands, and ask, "Am I a messenger of comfort to others?"

BEAUTIFYING FARMS.

Great progress, says an eastern exchange, has been made within the last twenty-five years, among the farmers of the country, not only in making their farms more productive, but in making them more attractive. This, in a large measure, is the result of prosperous farming. Those who had debts to pay, did not feel able to expend much in ornamenting their places; but since they have freed themselves from this burden, they have been more disposed to attend to the appearance of things.

There has also been an advance in taste. There are not so many now who decry all attention to the ornamental as a waste of time and money. This race of niggardly and boorish men is fast dying out. Increasing intelligence, the cultivation of agricultural reading, the infusion of a larger element of educated and cultivated men into the profession, have had a powerful influence in securing more attention to the æsthetics of farming instead of having everything expended for mere pecuniary returns. And this is a great advance. It ennobles the pursuit of the farmer. Man is a creature of taste, and not a mere grub; and he who neglects to cultivate and to gratify this element in his nature, degrades himself. Any one may form a pretty correct estimate of the intellectual, if not the moral, state of his neighbors, by simply looking over their farms. The one who allows his buildings and lands to lie in a slovenly state, when he has the means of improving them, may be a money-loving, but he will also be a slovenly man with no elevating instincts.

It is a great mistake to suppose that money spent in reasonably improving the appearance of a place is thrown away. It may be doubted whether there is any more direct method to increase its pecuniary value, which will depend much on its outward appearance. Tasteful and well painted buildings, well arranged yards, and gardens with neat fences, shade trees properly disposed, good farm fences, and cleanly kept fields, will set off a farm to great advantage, and make an amazing difference when it comes to be sold. And even if it be not sold, these things will add amazingly to the enjoyment of it by its possessor, if he be not blind to everything but the dollar.

Every man, too, owes it to the community in which he is living to contribute to its general reputation, and to the public enjoyment, by making all his surroundings as attractive as possible. There is such a thing as paying too much attention to outside and to show; but there is reason in all things, and a measure of time and attention and expense should be devoted by every one to making his farm and his home more attractive every year that he lives.

HOW OLD IS THE ENGLISH BIBLE?

On the 17th of May, 1881, was issued, in London, the Revised New Testament, for which one London publisher had advance orders for more than a million copies; and of which their agent in New York, where it was issued May 20, sold 365,000 copies before the end of the year. It was immediately reprinted in America, in some fifty editions, one of which had a circulation of 100,000 copies, and another a circulation of 65,000 copies, before January, 1882. Probably, within one year from the date of its issue, three million copies were bought in Great Britain and America.

On comparing this book with King James' translation, we find numerous changes, most of which are so unimportant that ordinary people wonder why they were made. In many instances, one word has been changed for another of exactly the same meaning. In some cases a delicate shade of difference can be detected; in other instances, the grammatical construction varies slightly; occasionally a sentence or word is omitted; but the ordinary reader, taking the book and reading it through, would detect few essential differences. No one, so far as we have been informed, has changed one article of his faith or one iota of his practice, and no sect has lost or gained a member, in consequence of the changes which have been made. The same facts are stated, and the same doctrines taught in both books. We have, therefore, substantially the same book that has been in circulation throughout the English-speaking world since 1611; the same book of which, during the present century, more than two hundred translations have been made,—thus placing it within the reach of the majority of the inhabitants of the globe.

We may now go back further, and we find that this New Testament is, in all essential particulars, the same as that published by Tyndale in 1526, and substantially the same as the translation made by Wyckliffe from the Latin in 1380. The difference between any of these copies does not affect the general integrity of the book; and whatever variations there may be in them are mainly due to occasional misapprehensions of the meaning of certain passages by translators, or to changes in the meaning of English words, which render some of the old expressions obsolete and unintelligible to the present generation of English readers. Our language has changed, but the book is substantially the same.

We may then safely say that the English New Testament has existed, with no essential variations, for the last five hundred years; manuscript copies of Wyckliffe's Testament of that age being still in existence; Wyckliffe's English New Testament not having been printed till it was more than four hundred years old.

Of course there have been numerous typographical errors in the different printed editions of the New Testament. We sometimes find a letter turned upside down, or a word misspelled. One edition of the Bible is called the "Vinegar Bible," because in one instance the word "vinegar" is printed where it should be "vineyard." Such variations as these are easily corrected, and mislead no one. Other more important, and in some cases intentional, errors have occurred, the authors of which have sometimes been severely punished; but these instances were few, and the more important the errors, the more sure they were to be speedily detected and corrected.

HUSK MATS.

A good, respectable-looking husk mat is not an unsightly object, and I wish every housekeeper knew what a world of scrubbing and wiping of floors they saved, that they might have one. One bushel basket and a boiler full of husks is sufficient to braid a large mat. If you have boys or girls, it will be just fun for them to braid one in the evening: but if, like myself, you have neither, it would pay you to take the time and do it yourself. Have ready a tea-kettle full of hot water, and turn on to the boiler of husks. Begin a common three-strand braid, and as you bring over a strand place about three husks on, leaving the large ends of the husks up. When enough is braided for a mat, sew firmly with twine in any shape you choose—long, round, or oval. Then sprinkle warm water on upper side. Run a fork through the husks, splitting the ends into a mass of little, curly fibers; then with the shears trim off evenly. This can all be done in one evening by a good worker. I braid enough in the fall to last me the year round.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

CREAM CAKE.—Four cups of flour, five eggs, one cup of sour cream, one cup of butter, two cups of sugar, and one teaspoonful of soda.

COOKIES.—Two cups of sugar, one cup of butter, four eggs, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, one teaspoonful of soda, flavor with nutmeg or lemon, and mix just stiff enough to roll.

GRAHAM PUDDING.—Two cups of graham flour, one cup of molasses, one cup of raisins, one cup of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of soda, and spice to taste. Steam three hours. Eat with sauce. It is just as good warmed over by steaming a little as when new.

DOUGHNUTS.—One quart of flour, one cup of sugar, one egg, two tablespoonfuls of shortening, one heaping teaspoonful of saleratus wet with sweet milk, add a little salt and spice to your taste.

CRANBERRY PIE.—Three cups of raw cranberries, chopped, three cups of sugar, a small piece of butter, one tablespoonful of corn starch with just cold water enough to wet it, then pour on hot water to make it thick like starch, and mix with the berries. This will make three pies. Make a nice crust for them.

DRIED APPLE CAKE.—Soak three cups of dried apples over night, chop slightly in the morning, then simmer two hours in two cups of molasses. add two eggs, one cup of sugar, one cup of sweet milk, three-fourths cup of butter, two teaspoonfuls of soda, flour to make a stiff batter, and spice to suit the taste. Bake in a moderate oven.

INDIAN PUDDING.—One cup of Indian meal, one cup of molasses, one teaspoonful of salt; scald thoroughly with one cup of boiling water; add a quart of milk, ; pour into the baking dish and bake one hour, stirring thoroughly at least twice while baking. Let it get about half cold before serving. We like just plain sweet cream for sauce.

SOFT GRAHAM BREAD.—One quart of good, rich buttermilk, a little salt, two rounding teaspoonfuls of soda, one-third cup of molasses or syrup, put all together in a pan, then stir in graham flour with a spoon until it is quite stiff. This will make two loaves, in deep tins of as good bread as it was ever my good fortune to eat at any one's table.

ROSE CAKE.—One and one-half cups of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one cup of water, the whites of five eggs beaten to a froth, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder mixed with enough flower to make a soft dough. Put a layer of dough in your pan, then sprinkle red frosting sugar on, then another layer, and so on, and you will have a beautiful cake.

GRAPE PIE.—Take a about a quart of whole grapes, separate the pulp from the skins, cook the pulp until the seeds can be sifted out, then return to the dish with the skins, put a little water with it, and let it just cook a little, then sweeten. Have a crust ready, pour in the grape, sprinkle a little flower over the pie, put on the upper crust, taking care to fix it so the juice won't run out, and bake.

ECONOMY.

The practice of economy in the house—that is, domestic economy, is considered by many the fundamental principle of wealth; the nucleus of a fortune! I am not prepared to answer this question strictly, but will say as far as my observation extends, "The saving and diligent hand maketh rich."

I call to mind several people who at the outset of married life, were possessed of a very comfortable salary, and because they thought it would always continue, the wife was not as prudent as she might have been in the management of household affairs, so they failed to pay a certain amount yearly for their home, consequently lost it.

There are so many ways in which the mothers and daughters can economize, if they will give the subject a little thought. The reason why so many people are always 'running behind-hand,' always in debt; is, not because they do not work as hard, or that they live better than their neighbors, but because they do not practice good economy.

We are sometimes reminded of Gail Hamilton, who, in writing upon this subject, says: "Moved with pity for the poor widow and her children, shivering over a few embers, you place your hand in your pocket and leave her a few dollars richer. You would not have done so had you known she would visit the photographer's the next day and obtain pictures of herself and family."

I do not believe this true of the majority of people, by any means. It is, in a great measure, figuratively speaking; and yet the main feature remains the same; that many people grow poor, and keep so, because they buy what they do not need, and have no money to purchase that they are in actual want of.

If we become acquainted with nature, we shall find economy among her fixed and immutable laws. Nothing is lost in her great laboratory. Let us learn of her then, if not elsewhere, this important lesson, and practice it in our daily lives.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

FRUIT CAKE.—One pound of butter, 8½ pound of sugar, one pound of flour, two pounds of currants, two pound of raisins, one and one-quarter pounds of citron, twelve eggs, leaving out the whites of six eggs for frosting, three nutmegs, one teaspoonful of mace, and one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Cut the citron in slices, and put in a layer of cake, then a layer of citron, until it is all used. Bake gradually four or five hours.

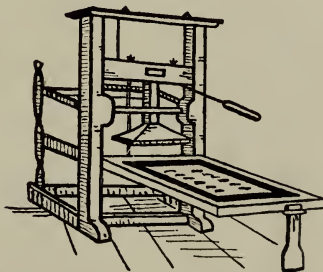

SOFT MOLASSES GINGERBREAD.—One cup of molasses, one teaspoonful of soda, one tablespoonful of ginger, one tablespoonful of butter or lard, and a pinch of salt. Stir this together and then pour on half a cup of boiling water and stir in one pint of flour. Bake about one inch deep in a sheet. This is very nice if pains are taken to have the water boiling, and to beat well when the flour is added.
